

In each case shown at right, the solid sphere has radius a and a total charge $+Q$. However, the sphere in case A is an insulator with its charge uniformly distributed throughout its volume, and the sphere in case B is a conductor.

Consider the statements about the electric potential at points P and S in the two cases.

