

Assume the position

A highway can be banked at just the correct angle so when a car moves through the curve at just the right speed, no friction is needed between the road and the tires to turn the car while it maintains the same height on the bank. Find the relationship between speed and banking angle.

r = radius of curvature

m = mass of the car

