

Two solid, insulating spheres are connected by a wire and a switch. The spheres are the same size but they have different initial uniform charge distributions.

Three students are discussing what would happen if the switch was closed.

